Frankfort Church Scene of Pretty June Wedding

A pretty June wedding was solemnized in St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed Church in Frankfort, Saturday evening June 26, at seven o'clock when Miss Faye Mills, daughter of Mr. Wm. Mills of Hazel Crest, Ill., became the bride of Mr. Roy Pfeiffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pfeiffer of New Lenox.

The double ring candle lighted ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Mr. Erich Bizer, before an altar decorated with ferns, palms and baskets of mixed garden flowers.

Preceding the ceremony, Glenn Voss, organist, played a group of love songs who also accompanied Mr. Arthur Lambrecht of Frankfort who sang "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was beautiful in a white slipper satin gown, fashioned with a long train and trimmed with wide bands of chantilly lace which also formed the yoke. Her three-tiered finger tip veil of illusion net was held in place by a tiara of pearl clusters and she carried an arm bouquet of white rose buds and baby breath tied with white ribbon. Her string of pearls was a gift from the groom.

Miss Lois Mills, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a floor length gown of peach mouseline de soie, with fitted bodice and long full sleeves gathered at the wrist. A matching blusher veil fell from a tiara of pearls and she carried Talisman roses and blue delphinium. Her string of pearls was a gift from the bride.

The bride's maids, Miss Shirley Pfeiffer, sister of the groom and Miss Marjorie Schmuhl, wore dresses and hats, in blue and yellow, respectively, which were fashioned identically as those worn by the maid of honor and their pearls were gifts from the bride. They carried yellow roses and blue delphiniums.

The flower girl, Ardis Batson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Batson of New Lenox, was adorable in her long frock of yellow marquisette and matching poke bonnet, as she scattered rose petals before the bride and her father who gave her in marriage. Her gift from the bride was a gold locket and chain.

Harlowe Jensen of New Lenox was best man, and Gilbert Smit of Monee and John Goldenzoph, Jr., also of New Lenox were ushers and candle-lighters.

After receiving many friends in the church foyer, the bridal party left for Joliet where the wedding dinner was served at the Woodruff hotel. Other guests there were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Mills of St. Anne; Mr. and Mrs. Koester and Mrs. E. J. Crost of Hazel Crest; Mr. and Mrs. C. Batson; Rev. and Mrs. Bizer and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heisner.

Later a dance was held at the Frankfort school gymnasium where about 350 guests were entertained.

After a week's honeymoon, the young couple will reside with the groom's parents. Mr. Pfeiffer is a former Frankfort resident, and is employed at the Elwood Ordnance works.

Will Bungling Influence Destiny of America?

Will the administration's increasingly serious bungling of war management decisively influence the destiny of America?

New Deal "planning", its cardinal creed, is proving catastrophic. Here are samples of things inciting greater and greater dissatisfaction, indignation, distrust of the powers-that-be at Washington:

In this land of abundance, the administration's past persistence in bringing about scarcity has resulted in deplorable, crippling conditions.

Price-fixing has misused inexcusably.

Even our armed forces are reported as unable to obtain adequate supplies of meat, notwithstanding that there has been created a cattle surplus so excessive that, even half of it, if brought to market, would supply, ranchers estimate, 200,000,000 people with beef for 12 months.

The latest lamentable fruit of official mismanagement is the closing of leading corn processing plants, essential for war production because of lack of supplies.

Ex-President Hoover warns that hunger will afflict us unless Washington mends its ways.

Almost everything OPA has touched has gone awry.

Black markets have become as scandalous as bootlegging became during prohibition, the authorities demonstrate no ability to cope with them.

We all know how ineptly gasoline and fuel oil rationing has been directed. More and more motorists in the East are being prosecuted, sentenced.

Eric A. Johnston, universally recognized as an outstandingly able business man and heretofore ardent co-operator with the government, is now moved to declare "our country is confronted by a crisis that daily grows more menacing, so serious that its dangers cannot be overemphasized. Washington is not winning the battle on the economic front. . . confusion and inefficiency in Washington serve to delay the day of victory. Washington dilly-dallies, argues about the jurisdiction of federal war agencies, plays politics, experiments with social measures, acts with indecision or not at all."

War news continues encouraging, with epochal developments imminent. The security markets are lazily marking time, may do so for a while.

The horse worked loose from its fastenings and started walking down Lincoln highway when it was struck by a car driven by Hal Rhodes, 1501 E. Washington Street, Joliet. The impact killed the horse almost instantly and damaged the automobile very badly.

Mrs. Rhodes suffered injuries as she was thrown into the back seat. The daughter Priscilla was uninjured. Mr. Rhodes sustained a severe cut on the hand requiring 4 stitches and Mrs. Rhodes was removed to Silver Cross hospital for observation.

Is There Anybody Home?

American soldiers, engaged in mopping up operations on Attu island, peek into a Japanese dugout in search of snipers. The dugout has a tent roof to keep out the bitter wind and cold of the bleak island that became a cemetery for the enemy. Most of the Japanese were killed in battle or committed suicide. Few were captured. The end of Japanese resistance on Attu was marked by a final suicidal enemy attack, early in the morning. The resulting battle was a slaughter in which it has been estimated that 50 Japanese were killed for every American. Some of the Japs struck their hand grenades against their helmets to start the detonation mechanism, then held the grenades to their chests until the explosion ended their lives. The final attack occurred in American positions above Cories Lake. One American colonel and other officers were surrounded in a tent from which they fought off Japs for seven hours. An example of the accuracy of the American's shooting was shown when the body of an Alaskan scout was found with twelve dead Japs lying in a half circle around him.

Speaking Sports

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

JUST why the Chicago Cubs have spent most of this season as a National league tail-end club is a question that baffles almost every baseball observer.

There is no logical reason why the Cubs should be a cellar team. General Manager Jim Gallagher has been quoted as saying he is unable to determine why the team has been eighth best most of the recent weeks of the season. Some rather smart baseball experts are completely mystified at the team's showing.

One thing is certain—and only one thing. The Cubs have lost a lot more games than they have won. One day the hitting is good and there is no pitching. A couple of days later the pitching is excellent and the hitting nonexistent. Then, the next game may see the defense crumble. Occasionally everything goes to ruin during the same game. At that point the Cubs have one of their "bad" days.

But Gallagher doesn't blame Manager Jim Wilson for the various shortcomings. He insists the Cubs have as good a spirit as any Cub team he's seen. And Gallagher, as general manager of the club, is Wilson's boss.

To date there have been no stories of club dissension—the usual prelude to a managerial change. Even the most bitter critics of the Gallagher-Wilson regime haven't hinted—at least out loud—that the Cubs are anything less than a fairly happy ball club.

Neither Gallagher nor Wilson have given up the thought that their boys will be pennant contenders before the season winds up in October. The Big Four pitching staff, including Claude Passeau, Lon Warneke, Bill Lee and Paul Derringer, have shown signs of strength recently, in great contrast to the horrible earlier weeks of the season.

It has been charged that Wilson doesn't get excited about losing. In other words, he grew too accustomed to the short end of the score during his years as a Phillie player and manager. He adjusted himself to defeat with no great pain. Gallagher denies this and insists that Wilson hates to lose as much as any manager in the big leagues.

Gallagher probably is right. No man likes to lose. And Wilson likely is as optimistic as any other manager. But his optimism has suffered many a staggering blow during the past months. Whether or not he will come through unscathed is a debatable question. . . .

Sarazen's Donation
To a rather weird looking iron club now resting in the museum of the United States Golf association, today's low-scoring golfers owe a debt of gratitude.

The club is sort of a mongrel job which Gene Sarazen donated to golf's hall of fame for inanimate objects. It is one which helped him win the American Open and British championships in 1932 and which is largely responsible for the low scores of the present day.

The club head resembles that of a niblick, except that it has a heavy flange at the bottom. Frequent applications of lead have made it even heavier. No thing of beauty, Sarazen's masterpiece resembles something that might be carried by a sportsman-bandit.

It's the forerunner of the present-day sand iron. And Sarazen well remembers its history:
"Back in 1932 I had an idea that the sand club Bobby Jones was using, with concave space, was illegal. It was subsequently ruled so. I set about to devise a sand iron of my own.

"I finally came up with this club with the flanged sole. I made it myself. That year I broke the scoring record in winning the British Open and tied the record in winning the National Open.

"In about three weeks there were 40,000 copies of the club being made and distributed, and I think that the low scoring since that time can be traced to that club. It eliminates paralysis in the bunkers, and made the good players all masters of bunker play."

Sarazen always was a bold player, and it is said that he became so proficient with the club that he would bet he could get out of a trap and down in one putt four out of five times.

In taking the 1932 British Open, Sarazen had rounds of 70, 69, 70 and 74 for a 283 total—two strokes better than the tournament record. That same year he had a poor start in the National Open with a 74 and 76 on his first two rounds. He came in with a 70 for the third tour and fired a blazing 66 for the windup and a total of 286.

GRANTLAND RICE

IT USED to be that there was nothing "so rare as a day in June" when football bounded back into the steamy summer scenery.

But this is the way it is now with the world upside down.

Here are some of the famous football people we have run across in the last few days—and they will all be on the busy side shortly:

Frank Leahy—Head Coach at Notre Dame: "We'll have a pretty fair squad at Notre Dame, including what we have left from last year and our navy additions. We won't have to travel far to play a number of first-class opponents and of course, we hope to meet Army again in New York for our only real trip. And I can tell you now, Army will be something to beat this next fall. Neither Notre Dame nor Army will have many big men, but we'll have a few fast ones."

Lou Little—Columbia: "We might have a pretty fair squad at Columbia. We have a number of opponents close at hand where little traveling will be needed. Of course, we can only use the navy men on their off hours. The idea isn't to have any championship team. But we'll build up the best team we can get, win or lose, for the good that football brings."

Carolinas Will Play

Herman Hickman—310 pounds from North Carolina State: "Are we going to play football in the Carolinas? One hundred per cent sure. We have a group of fine colleges fairly close—North Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Clemson and others. Tennessee isn't far away. Neither is Georgia Tech. Those that are under the navy will do pretty well—those under the army will have a tough time. But we are going to try to get every fellow to play football, whether he can play well or not. Kids need football—not only physically but for the rugged type of competition it brings. The two Carolinas will be right in the middle of the football map."

Ted Blair—One of Yale's best tackles: "No, Harvard's decision to give up intercollegiate sport doesn't affect Yale. With Howie Odell on the job we'll have a lively season, if we don't have a winning one."

Red Blaik—Army: "We won't have a big squad. I mean by that we'll have few men over 175 pounds. But we should have a smart, keen set of cadets who love football and who will match the spirit of any team they meet. We'll have an alert team with a fast charging line and several good backs who can kick and pass. Also run. I only wish the public could know what football means to the morale of the cadets, in spite of the 16 hours a day they give to the hard work and the discipline that makes the best type of officer."

The Competitive Side

Red certainly hits the nail on the head there. What a great many of our army war leaders don't seem to understand is that there is a mental or competitive side to sport as well as a physical side.

This is why we need football beyond any other single game.

There are other games that will give out just as much physical fitness—possibly better physical fitness.

Such games as handball, one of the best of all conditioners, cross-country running, boxing, calisthenics, etc.

But outside of boxing there is no other game that has football's worth as a competitive sport.

The navy has a better slant on this situation than the army has.

Pro Football

Pro football officials met a few days ago to outline the next fall campaign.

Most of the league is sure to go ahead with what it has left.

As pro games are only played on Sundays, there is no reason why those working in war plants shouldn't stick to their war jobs and still play football.

Most of the pros keep in good physical shape. They don't need as much coaching, so far as fundamentals go, as college players require.

The standard of play won't be as high as it was before, but it will keep about the same average that baseball has on hand.

And baseball isn't doing too badly. While some cities have fallen well behind in attendance, others, such as Philadelphia and Washington have shown a heavy increase over past years.

A close race can make up at least partly for the absence of stars.

The one feature that might cut in upon pro football is the probable drafting of married men with children.

This move may come along too late to affect baseball this summer, but it would have a rougher effect upon fall football.

Airplanes and Pilots in World War I, and Now

Our army and navy had only 55 planes when the United States entered the first World war. And 51 of these had been pronounced obsolete by the advisory committee on aeronautics.

The Allies had, all told, about 700 planes at the start. At the close of the war, Great Britain had 14,000, France had 12,000 and the United States, 10,000. At the war's end, Germany had about 11,000.

In 1914, there were only about 1,000 trained pilots in the world. Four years later there were more than 100,000. Today there are more than a quarter of a million.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

A chain of rest stations is rising across northern Brazil along the route of workers trekking into the Amazon Basin gateway of Belem to increase collection of wild rubber. They provide medical aid and other human comforts to the 50,000 additional workers being recruited for the Amazon rubber forces.

The rubber normally used in one month's manufacture of baby pants can make 2800 rubber lifeboats for ocean-going planes.

A check of 7,200 farm-owned trucks showed that only 25 per cent of the tires on them were good; 54 per cent were fair; and 21 per cent were in poor condition.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one when he learns that Ken has not been promoted. But his mother convinces Captain McLaughlin that the colt may be just what Ken needs. He has a hard time choosing his colt until he sees the yearling filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. Loco is the horse breeder's name for a no-good, untamable horse. Now Ken has come to the breakfast table beaming with joy and simply dying to tell someone of his discovery of Rocket and her colt.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VII

If you can raise good calves and colts on it, I guess you can raise boys, Nell reasoned. And McLaughlin, with a long line of oat-eating Scotch ancestors behind his brawn and toughness, agreed.

With the oatmeal there was always a big pitcher of yellow Guernsey cream and a bowl of brown sugar. Nell, smiling, pushed them toward Ken, noticing the unusual color in his face. The boy flashed a glance at his mother; his eyes were dark with excitement. His whole face was lit up—transfigured really—and she felt a slight sense of shock. What had happened? He had been different all week, more sure of himself, more alert and happy, but this—

Rob McLaughlin was looking at Ken too, not missing a thing. Something had happened that morning on the range—

"What horse did you ride?" asked he.

"Lady."

"And where is she now? On her way to the border?" jocularly.

"I put her in the Home Pasture. She's out there at the fountain now."

"Was she hot?"

"No, sir. I cooled her off coming home." There was a little smile of pride on Ken's face, and Nell thought, all the right answers, so far.

The examination went on. "Did you give her a good workout?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then don't ride her again today. Take Baldy if you want a horse."

"Yes, sir."

"Break anything? Lose anything?"

"No, sir."

Rob laughed. He leaned over and patted Ken on the head. "Good work, young man—coming along!"

Ken burst out laughing. He was so excited it was hard to sit still and answer properly. He wasn't going to tell about his colt yet—not till tomorrow when the week was up. But it was hard to hold it in, hard not to jump up and run around the kitchen, shouting and crowing. Anyway—he could tell about Rocket.

"I didn't lose anything, I found something!" He boasted, shoveling in big spoonfuls of oatmeal. "I found Rocket. She's back."

When Ken went to bed that night, he kissed his mother, and then threw his arms around her and held her hard for a moment.

Smiling, she put her hand on his head. "Well, Ken—her violet eyes were soft and understanding."

He went upstairs, smiling back at her over his shoulder, having a secret with her. He knew that she knew.

He lit the candle in his room and stood staring at the flickering light. This was like a last day. The last day before school is out, or before Christmas, or before his mother came back after a visit in the East. Tomorrow was the day when, really, his life would begin. He would get his colt.

He couldn't quite remember the color of her. Orange—pink—tangerine color—tail and mane white, like the hair of an Albino boy at school. Albino—of course, her grandsire was the Albino—the famous Albino stud. He felt a little uneasiness at this; the Albino blood wasn't safe blood for a filly to have. But perhaps she hadn't much of it. Perhaps the cream tail and mane came from Banner, her sire. Banner had a cream tail and mane too when he was a colt; lots of sorrel colts had. He hoped she would be docile and good—not like Rocket. Which would she take after? Rocket? Or Banner? He hadn't had time to get a good look into her eyes.

Ken began to undress. Walking around his room, his eyes caught sight of the pictures on the wall—they didn't interest him.

The speed of her! She had run away from Banner. He kept thinking about that. It hardly seemed possible. His father always said Rocket was the fastest horse on the ranch, and now Rocket's filly had run away from Banner.

Riding down the mountain that day Ken had traced back all his recollections of her. The summer before, when he and Howard had seen the spring colts, he hadn't especially noticed her. He remembered that he had seen her even before that, soon after she was born. He had been out with Gus, one day, in the meadow, during the spring holiday. They were clearing some driftwood out of the irrigation ditch, and they had seen Rocket standing in a gully on the hillside, quiet for once, and eyeing them cautiously.

"Ay bet she got a colt," said Gus; and they walked carefully up the draw. Rocket gave a wild snort, thrust her feet out, shook her head wickedly, then fled away. And as they reached the spot, they saw standing there the wavering, pinkish colt, barely able to keep its feet. It gave a little squeak and started after its mother on crooked, wobbling legs.

"Yee whiz! Luk at de little flicka!" said Gus.

"What does flicka mean, Gus?"

"Swedish for little gurl, Ken—"

He had seen the filly again late in the fall. She was half pink, half yellow—with streaked untidy looking hair. She was awkward and ungainly, with legs too long, haunches a little too high.

And then he had gone away to school and hadn't seen her again until now—she ran away from Banner—Her eyes—they had looked like balls of fire this morning. What color were they? Banner's were brown with flecks of gold, or gold with flecks of brown—Her speed and her delicate curving lines made him think of a greyhound he had seen running once, but really she was more like just a little girl than anything—the way her face looked, and the way her blonde hair blew—a little girl—

Ken blew out the light and got into bed, and before the smile had faded from his face, he was asleep—

"I'll take that sorrel filly of Rocket's; the one with the cream tail and mane."

Ken made his announcement at the breakfast table.

After he spoke there was a moment's astonished silence. Nell

"Yee whiz! Luk at de little flicka!" said Gus.

groped for recollection, and said, "A sorrel filly? I can't seem to remember that one at all—what's her name?"

But Rob remembered. The smile faded from his face as he looked at Ken. "Rocket's filly, Ken?"

"Yes, sir," Ken's face changed too. There was no mistaking his father's displeasure.

"I was hoping you'd make a wise choice. You know what I think of Rocket—that whole line of horses—"

Ken looked down; the color ebbed from his cheeks. "She's fast, Dad, and Rocket's fast—"

"It's the worst line of horses I've got. There's never one amongst them with real sense. The mares are hellions and the stallions outlaws; they're untamable."

"I'll tame her."

Rob guffawed. "Not I, nor anyone, has ever been able to really tame any one of them."

Kennie's chest heaved.

"Better change your mind, Ken. You want a horse that'll be a real friend to you, don't you?"

"Yes—" Ken's voice was unsteady.

"Well, you'll never make a friend of that filly. Last fall after all the colts had been weaned and separated from their dams, she and Rocket got back together—no fence'll hold 'em—she's all out and scared up already from tearing through barbed wire after that wild mother of hers."

Kennie looked stubbornly at his plate.

"Change your mind?" asked Howard briskly.

"No."

"I don't remember seeing her this year," said Nell.

"No," said Rob. "When I drove you up a couple of months ago to look them over and name them and write down their descriptions, there was a bunch missing, don't you remember?"

"Oh, yes—then she's never been named—"

"I've named her," said Ken. "Her name is Flicka."

"Flicka," said Nell cheerfully. "That's a pretty name."

But McLaughlin made no comment, and there was a painful silence.

Ken felt he ought to look at his father, but he was afraid to. Everything was changed again, they weren't friends any more. He forced himself to look up, met his father's angry eyes for a moment, then quickly looked down again.

"Well," McLaughlin barked. "It's your funeral—or hers. Remember one thing. I'm not going to be out of pocket on account of this—every time you turn around you cost me money—"

Ken looked up, wondering, and shook his head.

"Time's money, remember," said his father. "I had planned to give you a reasonable amount of help in breaking and taming your colt. Just enough. But there's no such thing as enough with those horses."

Gus appeared at the door and said, "What's today, Boss?"

McLaughlin shouted, "We're going out on the range to bring in the yearlings. Saddle Taggart, Lady and Shorty."

Gus disappeared, and McLaughlin pushed his chair back. "First thing to do is get her in. Do you know where the yearlings are?"

"They were on the far side of the Saddle Back late yesterday afternoon—the west end, down by Dale's ranch."

"Well, you're the Boss on this round-up—you can ride Shorty."

McLaughlin and Gus and Ken went out to bring the yearlings in. Howard stood at the County gate to open and close it.

They found the yearlings easily. When they saw that they were being pursued, they took to their heels. Ken was entranced to watch Flicka—the speed of her, the power, the wildness—she led the band.

He sat motionless, just watching and holding Shorty in when his father thundered past on Taggart and shouted, "Well, what's the matter? Why didn't you turn 'em?"

Ken woke up and galloped after them.

Shorty brought in the whole band. The corral gates were closed, and an hour was spent shunting the ponies in and out and through the chutes until Flicka was left alone in the small round branding corral. Gus mounted Shorty and drove the others away, through the gate, and up the Saddle Back.

But Flicka did not intend to be left. She hurled herself against the poles which walled the corral. She tried to jump them. They were seven feet high. She caught her front feet over the top rung, clung, scrambled, while Kenie held his breath for fear the slender legs would be caught between the bars and snapped. Her hold broke, she fell over backwards, rolled, screamed, tore around the corral.

One of the bars broke. She hurled herself again. Another went. She saw the opening, and as neatly as a dog crawls through a fence, inserted her head and forefeet, scrambled through and fled away, bleeding in a dozen places.

As Gus was coming back, just about to close the gate to the County Road, the sorrel whipped through it, sailed across the road and ditch with her inimitable floating leap, and went up the side of the Saddle Back like a jack rabbit.

From way up the mountain, Gus heard excited whinnies, as she joined the band he had just driven up, and the last he saw of them they were strung out along the crest running like deer.

"Yee whiz!" said Gus, and stood motionless and staring until the ponies had disappeared over the ridge.

Then he dismounted, remounted Shorty, and rode back to the corrals.

Walking down from the corrals, Rob McLaughlin gave Kenie one more chance to change his mind. "Better pick a horse that you have some hope of riding one day. I'd have got rid of this whole line of stock if they weren't so damned fast that I've had the fool idea that someday there might turn out one gentle one in the lot, and I'd have a race horse. But there's never been one so far, and it's not going to be Flicka."

"It's not going to be Flicka," chanted Howard.

"Maybe she might be gentled," said Ken; and although his lips trembled, there was fanatical determination in his eye.

"Ken," said McLaughlin, "it's up to you. If you say you want her, we'll get her. But she wouldn't be the first of that line to die rather than give in. They're beautiful and they're fast, but let me tell you this, young man, they're loco!"

Ken flinched under his father's direct glance.

"If I go after her again, I'll not give up whatever comes, understand what I mean by that?"

"Yes."

"What do you say?"

"I want her."

"That's settled then," and suddenly Rob seemed calm and indifferent.

"We'll bring her in again tomorrow or next day—I've got other work for this afternoon."

A PEOPLE IN DISTRESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:6-14; 2:23-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—They cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.—Exodus 2:23.

Today is Independence Day. Yet much of the world is in bondage, and the rest of it in a struggle to prevent freedom from perishing from the earth.

Our lesson too is about a nation in bondage, but we learn from it that there is a way to be free. Even so we declare the way of personal liberty which is open and free.

The Lord Jesus Christ opened it at Calvary's tree and anyone who is still the bond slave of Satan may make this a great and glorious Independence Day by now declaring his faith in the Deliverer of our souls.

We begin today a series of lessons in the book of Exodus which reveal the high and mighty hand of God working on behalf of His people.

The family of Jacob—or, as the Bible calls them, the children of Israel—prospered in Egypt particularly as long as Joseph and the rulers who remembered him were alive. But they soon learned one of life's bitter lessons, that—

I. Prosperity Is Not Always a Blessing (1:6-11).

The Hebrews were a peaceful, law-abiding people. They were God's chosen people, and as He blessed them they prospered, and thus innocently they brought upon themselves the hatred of the suspicious Egyptians.

Prosperity is never an unmixed blessing. We as a nation know that to be true. Not only does it lead to a certain softening of the sinews, but all too often it results in a weakening of the moral fiber, which makes man easy prey to the attack of the enemy of our souls.

Is it not strange, then, that we should—even in times of all-out warfare—be so eager to chase the dollar that we are willing to neglect our children, forget church, live unnatural lives, just that we may make more and more money?

The Egyptians had, humanly speaking, reason to fear this great nation which was growing up in their midst. The new rulers did not know Joseph and had forgotten the spirit in which he had brought his family into the land. The leaders of the Egyptians therefore made plans which appealed to their brilliant leaders as politic and wise. But they reckoned without God, and the burdens and afflictions they placed on the Israelites only served to bring further blessing.

So Israel learned a lesson which our present sorry world can profit by, that—

II. Persecution Is Not Always a Burden (vv. 12-14).

The people of Israel did not appreciate it, but the bitterness of their bondage was a blessing in disguise. Note that—

1. It Kept Them Separate as a People. Affliction often serves to keep God's people separated from the world. It is doing so today.

2. It Disciplined Them and Prepared Them for the Hardships of Their Wilderness Journey. We too do well to remember that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and that if we are properly "exercised" thereby, our sorrows may yield rich fruit in our lives.

3. It Threw Them Back upon God. Many are the saints of God who have found that the fiery trial, the burden so hard to understand, or some affliction of their body, has caused them to bring their burden to the Lord. We have traveled far on the road of faith when we have reached the place where we learn that "man's extremity is God's opportunity."

They had only one place to turn. They were hemmed in on every side, but, as ever, they found that the way up no man can close. They called on their God.

III. Prayer Always Brings Deliverance (2:23-25).

Does God really know when His people suffer? Does He really care? Yes, He does. "They cried," and "God heard" and "remembered." That's all we need to know. The groaning of His people had already stirred God's gracious and tender heart. But He waited to hear their cry before He answered. Such is the law of prayer. May we not forget it. Far too often we turn to everyone and everything else, and finally, in desperation, to God. Why not turn to Him first?

Does God hear and answer prayer? Yes, but remember that real prayer is the cry of faith coming from the heart of an obedient child. God may answer other prayers, but He always answers such a prayer.

His answer may not be in accord with our opinion of what it should be, for His wisdom is infinite. He knows better than we what the answer should be. Let us trust the Judge of all the earth to do right (Gen. 18:25).

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

For a spring dessert how about rhubarb shortcake? Serve rosy rhubarb sauce over slightly hot biscuits made with a bit of sugar added to flour.

When stubborn particles of meat and vegetables stick to the inside of the grinder, run a small piece of dry bread through the grinder. The bread acts as a chaser, and saves work in the dishpan.

Mayonnaise used on sandwiches should be thick enough to prevent its running out at the sides.

One-fourth teaspoon lemon juice added to each cup of heavy cream will hasten whipping.

The setting of a jelly can be hastened by placing the mold in a pan of cold water.

A cloth dipped in linseed oil and wiped over a polished surface will improve the appearance.

Frozen meats should not be thawed before cooking. Soaking them to hasten defrosting impairs the flavor.

A piece of wax tied in a rag, and rubbed over the hot iron before ironing, will help it to run along smoothly, and prevent its sticking.

'Twas Too Late Then for Stammerer to Take Time

As the train sped on its way, the shy-looking, little man leaned forward and tapped the big man opposite on the knee.

"Your b-b-b—" he began, and it was obvious he was making a big effort to control his stammer.

The other man smiled gently.

"Now, take it slowly," he said.

"Yes, b-b-but your b-b-b—" the little man gulped.

"No hurry, old chap," said the big man, winking at the others in the coach; "just take a deep breath and—"

Crash! His words ended in a yelp of pain as his bag up in the rack overbalanced and struck him squarely on the head.

Sharp Shooting

In the Solomons recently, American soldiers operating a battery of 90-mm. guns shot down a number of Japanese planes at the rate of one for every 50 shots fired, a record unparalleled in anti-aircraft marksmanship.

Citizens Service Committee: Sorry for not writing sooner and I can't think of excuse except loss of memory. I think I have found Rip Van Winkles secret, been asleep for two months, yet woke up and found myself here in Ventura, Cal. one day my hat was gone, then I had to eat out of canteen cups for two days because I couldn't find my messkit, the climax came when started to salute the Col. back in the tent, this could go on forever but I don't think you will believe me.

This town of Ventura reminds me of Tinley Park, a fast car can go through it in three minutes, its nice tho, quiet, clean eternal sunshine. I've so much sun tan I don't know whether to say 'yes sir' or 'yass suh' and jillions of beautiful creatures called girls. Not many soldiers here all we have to do is get a pass shine our buttons throw out our chests (what little there is), we get on the main drag and the only people there are gorgeous girls and a few soldiers it's heaven we say and then it happens. Trains roar in, loaded down and out pour Sailors. There are sailors in the door way, on the streets, they are everywhere, so many I almost get seasick and the girls? what girls? There ain't no girls so we say, "aw nuts and go to a movie".

And the picture showing on the screen, the Navy Comes Through.

Well Lu, I notice that the letters are starting to slow down and if Herman Roecker reads this letter he might drop a letter this way and give his excuse for living. Hope everything is getting better for you Lu and everyone else. Received the Easter Box OK and many thanks to everyone responsible. Remember that spider that crawled out of my pen? Well he's a pig boy now and very fond of flags. Good by Lu thanks again.

Dear Service Comm. Thank you very much for the package I received a few days ago. It was indeed a surprise. We have been enjoying very warm weather. The trouble is there are too many mosquitoes. I am still enjoying the Army life.

Dear Folks:

I wish to thank you for the Easter box which arrived in perfect condition. I know I am a bit late in writing but they have a way of keeping us busy. The weather has been very warm and I notice the Magnolia trees are just beginning to flower. The Blue Ridge Mountains surround the camp and they are quite beautiful at this time of year. But the dusty drill fields are a dull sight now or at any time of the year. I am still working in the food ration department of the Second Regt. Thanking you again for your thoughtfulness.

Dear Friends:

I have finally found the time to thank you for the well easter box sent me. I have finally gotten to gunners school, but I have not started any classes yet. I have another week before I will start school.

I don't think my address was given to the Tinley Park Times the last time I moved as the papers I get were sent to my previous field first and I think quite a few were lost. I would appreciate if my address was given them. Thanking you in advance I remain,

Word has been received from your regular Orland correspondent, Mrs. S. S. Knox who has been in Florida for the past 3 weeks, caring for the parents of Mr. Knox, who are both seriously ill. She seemed to think that those she left in charge of her work during her absence are falling down on the job as she said there "wasn't enough Orland news" in the paper. We want our readers to know we are doing the best we can with the material furnished us, so if you want to keep peace in the Knox family and also see Orland news spread all over the columns of the Herald, please phone Orland 100W or drop a line to Box 103, Orland Park and tell us what's what and what's doing and the "pinch hit committee" will endeavor to write it up in approved newspaper style.

The Boy Scouts are asking the help of all their friends in the community.

As in every other organization, there comes a time when financial help is necessary. The Potawatomi Trails Council is having its' annual drive for funds to carry on the work of Scouting throughout the entire district. This includes not only Orland Park, but also all the towns around us, such as Tinley Park, Markham, Harvey, Midlothian and others. Each town has been assigned a quota and it is up to us to try and meet ours.

We can only do this with the help of our friends. You can do your part and any amount you can give will be appreciated. By your donation, you will be assisting in the carrying on of one of the greatest works possible, the making of good citizens of tomorrow.

It has been established that one of every three boys in the scout services was a scout. Their scout training has helped them considerably and because of it, many a boy has returned safely when otherwise he might not have returned at all.

One of our representatives will call on you soon for your contribution. Help insure the future manhood of America. Any contribution you make to the Boy Scouts may be deducted from your income tax.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christian Science" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 27.

The Golden Text was, "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee" (Isaiah 60:1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry. For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2: 1, 3, 14).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Science derives its sanction from the Bible, and the divine origin of Science is demonstrated through the holy influence of Truth in healing sickness and sin. This healing power of Truth must have been anterior to the period in which Jesus lived. It is as ancient as the Ancient of Days" (Page 146).

WOMEN'S SERVICE CLUB NEWS

By Mrs. Leslie Clark

The regular meeting will be held Monday July 12 instead of the 5th because of the holiday being celebrated on that day. However, we will make our first contribution of cakes and cookies to the Servicemen's Center in Joliet on Friday July 9th. All members are requested to leave cookies or cake at Mrs. Berle Needham's residence not later than 4 o'clock in the afternoon so that they may be taken to Joliet on the 4:35 train.

Pvt. Spencer Hausser is enjoying a 15 day furlough.

Pvt. John Nordsell has been transferred from Camp McCoy, Wis., to the air base at Amarilla, Texas.

Three more of our boys have rated promotions. They are: Berle Needham and Gordon Clevenger, who have been made Corporals, and, somewhere out in the Pacific, Dave McMillan has been made Machine Gunner 2-C. Congratulations, boys.

We received the following letter recently from Ellsworth McGovney in England, dated June 16:

"When I returned from a very delightful weekend spent in a lovely hilled-in town, out in the middle of nowhere, I found a box waiting for me on my desk. I was quite mystified when upon close scrutiny, I saw that it boasted several Christmas seals. But upon examining it, still more thoroughly I found it was the box prepared and mailed by the Service Club.

It is only a day after opening it, but already some of the contents have been pressed into service. Please be assured of, and accept my gratitude.

I'm rather glad it took so long for the box to come, because by this time a good many of the things I received for Christmas have been used or discarded and fresh supplies are very welcome."

All that we can say Ellsworth, is that we were as surprised as you, and happy that some of the contents were still useable, after six months.

The Home Mission Circle of the Mokena Baptist Church will meet on July 7 at 2 P. M. at the Mission hall on Front St. All are invited.

Aviation Student Arthur W. Hurley, 18, of Mokena, Ill. son of Mr. Gilbert Hurley of Mokena has arrived at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo. for a course of Army Air Force instruction lasting approximately five months, prior to his appointment as an Aviation Cadet in the Army Air Forces. During this period he will take numerous academic courses as well as elementary flying training. Upon completion of the course he will be classified as a pilot navigator or bombardier and go to schools of the flying training command for training in these specialties.

Tunisia, North Africa
May 26th, 1943

Dear Mr. Semmler:

For some time now I have been receiving The News-Bulletin. I am very sorry not to have been able to let you know my appreciation before this, so allow me to say thank you kindly, I am sincerely enjoying reading about the many acquaintances around Mokena.

It has been nine months since leaving the States and seven of them have been spent here in Africa. Have been practically all over Tunisia, including the two great cities of Tunis and Bizetia. I even read an article in the Bulletin about Kasserine Pass. Far be it for you to know that your paper would reach somebody who actually participated in the battle, but that is just exactly what happened.

At present we are taking a well deserved rest and going swimming in the good old Mediterranean off the shores of Bizetia. The weather is ideal, not hot, but warm with a rather cool breeze.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the many friends who have written me. "Mail Call always means more to us who are away from our loved ones than Chow."

Again I say, thank you Mr. Semmler for your kind thoughtfulness in putting my name on your subscription list.

Sincerely yours,
Alvin Nelson

Seek Skilled Tradesmen

Naval Construction Battalions seek to enlist 100,000 skilled tradesmen in nation wide drive.

Out on Island X where the Seabees are building the advance and mobile bases for the Armed forces, nothing is too difficult to accomplish. They are known by the slogan, "Can Do". So July 4th has been named Can Do Day, not only in commemoration of jobs well done by the Battalions, but as a rallying call for new recruits.

Now the Navy is seeking 100,000 more skilled tradesmen, mechanics, carpenters, machinists, carpenters, draftsmen, electricians, riggers, powdermen, pipefitters and plumbers, welders, wharf builders, concrete workers and many others. These men will build the new bases on islands and territory yet to be taken from the enemy, and to replace battalions in the field, who are in need of a well reserved rest.

Naval ratings up to and including Chief Petty Officer with salaries from $54 to $126 per month, plus 20 percent extra for overseas duty, are offered skilled workmen commensurate with experience and ability. In addition enlisted men receive excellent food and quarters, expert dental care and medical care, uniforms, generous allowance for dependents and other incidentals.

Most attractive of all is that a man can do his part in the war effort and yet continue to work at his trade keeping up with all the new developments and gaining the benefit of the experience of others.

Men 17 to 50 are eligible for the Seabees and there is a new plan of voluntary induction offered to men 18 to 31 with construction experience.

The Navy Recruiting station at Post Office Building, Aurora, Ill., is prepared to furnish full details without obligation.

BUY MORE WAR BONDS

There will be American justice for the savages of Tokio but our trial and punishment of Tojo and his criminals will cost blood, sweat, toil and tears and money. You can supply the money by upping your war bond buying through the payroll savings plan. Figure it out yourself and see where the money is coming from. How much does it cost you and your family to live each month? How much money is coming in from all members of your family? Put the extra money into war bonds, every penny of it. HOME-CANNED BERRIES TAKE LITTLE SUGAR

Home canned berries play leading roles in the pantry because they contribute vitamins and minerals for health, can be used in many ways, and are easy and inexpensive to can.

Blackberries, blueberries, boysenberries, raspberries, elderberries—can them all and others, too, with little or no sugar. Sugar gives them better flavor and more calories, but has nothing to do with keeping qualities.

Berries are too precious to waste and none will be wasted if you will see to it that every step taken is the right one. First of all, wash, rinse and examine your jars. Be sure to inspect the top edges of those to be sealed with glass top seal or two-piece vacuum seal closures because top seals refuse to work unless tops of the jars are perfect. Cover jars, glass lids, and zinc caps with luke-warm water, heat to boiling and keep hot until needed. Wash and rinse rubbers and vacuum seal lids and drop them in boiling water—they don't need boiling unless you plan to do old-fashioned open kettle canning—then they must be boiled a few minutes to sterilize.

Every berry must be fresh, sound, ripe, and firm. Wash them carefully and then take your choice of canning methods.

Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, prefers to hot-pack berries. This is how it is done. Place berries in a wide, shallow pan; add one-half cup sugar, or less, for each quart of berries; set the pan over low heat and simmer until the berries heat through and the sugar dissolves (remember you don't have to use any sugar); pour the hot berries into clean, hot jars and process five minutes in hot water-bath canner.

If you want your berries to really star, can them without sugar. Then they can be used as if they were fresh from the patch. The juice can be drained off and used for making jelly. The berries can go into a pie or into jam—a jam turnover tucked in a lunch box will make the noon hour much more pleasant for somebody and surely you need nobody to tell you that jelly and jam are far more delicious when freshly made than at any other time.

If every man, woman and child in the United States lays aside $100 the aggregate will be about $13,000,000,000 or the amount the Treasury must raise in its Second War Loan.

Not everybody with a dollar to spare can shoot a gun straight—but everybody can shoot straight to the bank and buy War Bonds. Buy your 10% every pay day.

GROUP SELFISHNESS AND AMERICA

IN THESE DAYS of intensive national war stress, groups of American people play the war game for what they or their group can get out of the war effort, rather than for what is best for the nation now and in the future. The dominating sin of all such groups is selfishness.

Recently I listened to a speaker talking on the subject of "The Labor Situation of Today." He was employed in his state to handle the farm labor problem and was naturally sympathetic with the farm interests. His audience was a group of just average Americans, including farmers, merchants, small industrialists and others who go to make up the population of a country community.

In summing up, he said that labor, as represented by labor leaders; farmers, as represented by leaders of farm organizations, and industry and the politicians were all attempting to take advantage of war conditions to further their own ends. Each group was more interested in securing a present advantage for themselves than in winning the war and the peace; that despite these conditions, we would win the war, but as a result of the group selfishness, we would lose a prized possession—the American system of free enterprise; that those interested in instituting in America a new economic system were utilizing the selfishness of these groups to further their desire for an economic change.

The speaker's conclusions were quite correct. Group selfishness, making of political capital out of the exigencies of war, will overthrow our free enterprise system. There is happening just what Arthur Bal-four, the great English statesman, told me on November 12, 1918, would happen if America should become involved in another world conflict, which he could see in the then "comparatively near future."

INFLATION AND ITS CONTROL

WHEN WE HAVE more money than commodities money will buy, demand pushes the price skyward and decreases money values. That is inflation. The government is attempting to control this by limiting prices and taking money from people for taxes and for the purchase of war bonds. The real basis of it all is the increased money in the pockets of workers and the policy of the government has been to keep on increasing that by a continuous raise in wages, either as direct hourly pay or as overtime at time and one-half pay. There is a limit to the money water the dam will hold. The place to remedy the danger is at the source.

WAR'S END

I WAS IN LONDON when World War I ended. I saw the joy-crazed people of that great metropolis celebrate the close of hostilities with every evidence of a mad delirium that continued for a week. My hope is to see the end of World War II as it will be celebrated in an American rural community. In such a setting there will be, I am sure, less of the dramatic, but a greater spiritual sincerity than what I saw in London. It will be the kind of spiritual sincerity that is characteristic of America's rural people and it has a greater and deeper meaning than the joy-crazed shouts of a metropolitan multitude.

JAPANESE LOYALTY ON THE MAINLAND

IN HAWAII, some four or five years ago, secret service officers of the army and navy attempted to convince me that the Japs in the islands were not to be trusted. Surface appearances all pointed in the other direction and I did not believe what I was told. Pearl Harbor demonstrated that there was something more than surface appearance. What was true in Hawaii can also be true among the Japs on our mainland. There may be some good ones, but it takes more than the word of a Jap to provide convincing proof.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

QUITE PROPERLY the Allies are demanding unconditional surrender, but from whom is that unconditional surrender to be accepted? Is there anyone in the Axis nations who can speak for all and if so, could we accept his word? When the German army quits, we can know the war in Europe is over, regardless of who offers the white flag. That is the kind of unconditional surrender the Allies are expecting. The Tunisian brand will be satisfactory.

GOVERNMENT OF CIVILIANS

SOME PEOPLE are confused as to the meaning and extent of the President's title as commander-in-chief. Under the Constitution, he is technically the commander-in-chief of the armed forces only. For the civilian population, he is the President, and to civilians the commander-in-chief title does not apply. Ours is a government of civilians, and not of soldiers.

IT IS ONLY THOSE who do nothing who never make mistakes.

New Yorkers

Are Talking About:

Richard Tregaskis, INS correspondent and author of the click, "Guadalcanal Diary," is due back soon—with a new manuscript. His royalties on "Canal" are over $60,000. A few years ago he was peddling sewing machines during a Summer vacation to pay the next year's tuition at Harvard. Herbert Clyde Lewis was a rewrite man over at the Herald Trib not many weeks ago. One night he did a piece for the mags, but all spurned it. Except Whit Burnett at Story Magazine. Paid the top price, too. $50. Lewis needed that $50. You may have read it. The title: "Two Faced Quilligan." 20th Century Fox bought it for $25,000—and now Lewis is out there at the studio scribbling things at $750 per. Jimmy Durante, however, probably never will amount to much as a litree man. Cosmopolitan asked him to jot down 300 words on "What Is Wrong With Women?" and he can't get started, claiming he can't find nothin' wrong wid 'em. Jan Valtin can't sell a line until reviewed by Mr. Whiskers.

CBS keeps its commentators on the breathless list by telling them to be ready for overseas assignment on 24 hours' notice. If you have $10,000,000 you can buy the Blue Network.

Life Story mag will soon unveil what it calls a racket. It will slam the fortune-tellers, allegedly preying on war mothers and kin. It reminds us of the wealthy man whose hobby was fortune-tellers. One day about 12 years ago he was having his fortune told and the teller asked: "Are you building a big home?" "Why yes!" he said. "Well," she told him, "when it is finished—you will die!" He and his family have been living in it since—but he has never really had it finished. Workmen are instructed to keep adding this and that to it. They build a new wing—or change a room—and will never really "finish it."

Add earaches: The society matron in a swank spot who audibly groaned that the war was ruining her dinner parties. She simply couldn't get initialed matchbox covers any more! "Watch on the Rhine," the Lillian Hellman prize-winner, was written around actual events in the life of a man named Katz. A gov't film now being made is called "The Fall of Italy." Joseph E. Davies refused to broadcast from Russia or write articles for high U. S. fees. "I am only a letter carrier," he said. Tip-off on the Argentine situation: "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" is not allowed to be shown there.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lanterns: "The Russian Story" is a record of ten centuries of that nation's struggles against invaders. If you want to know how far the Nazis have strayed from civilization—watch their troops at Smolensk advancing behind women and children.

The Networks: Dinah Shore with Paul Whiteman and his wizards, Summering in the spot vacated by Edger Bergen, are as good a half hour as you'll find on the dials. Correspondent Wallace Carroll on "We, the People" revealed how Pierre Laval picks up a few extra francs. His print shop, Carroll reported, gets out the Nazi forgeries. "Easy Aces" celebrates 13 years on the air. A pair of Aces, it seems, remains a good bet.

The Magazines: Somerset Maugham in Red Book observes that when London was being bombed from sun-up to sundown, the detective novel won added popularity. Imagine that: With suspense showered on the Brits, they had to look for it in books! The startler in Fortune (published by Henry Luce, her husband) is the reference to Clare Luce's "globaloney" as "ill-mannered."

Lieut. James Burchard, formerly with the World-Telegram (and now on the staff of Stars and Stripes at Algiers) is probably the first to be divorced via V-Mail. His wife sent him some forms to fill out, but they apparently were lost or sunk en route. Mrs. Burchard then put the necessary papers on a V-letter and sent them to her husband. He signed them—mailed them back—and the divorce was granted.

When the trial of George Sylvester Viereck (admitted Nazi agent) starts on the 18th, several surprise witnesses dug up by the FBI will worry the defense. Harry James says the "greatest song" he's ever heard is Robin and Warren's "No Love, No Nothin'!" On July 15th the U. S. will have been in this war longer than it was in the last one. Cesar Romero is now in the Coast Guard. An eve's gazette is readying a series to show that vice and gambling have never been so open since the early 1920s.

Washington, D. C.

NEW FAR EASTERN DRIVE It now seems certain that we will concentrate on the Far East to a much greater degree than most people expected.

U. S. naval officials had been privately skeptical of British co-operation in the Far East and never expected Churchill to come through. However, he and Roosevelt both agreed that the time had arrived for vigorous operations to stop the Japs before they dug in so deeply on the Pacific islands that it would take years to dislodge them.

The British have now given definite commitments regarding certain operations. This is important. It so happens that the British do not promise easily. Our own top strategists are inclined to make promises quickly, but sometimes have to explain them away when conditions change and it is obvious they cannot be kept. But the British, though awfully hard to pin down, have absolutely kept their agreements when once made.

What these commitments are remain a military secret. However, certain moves which are known to all, including the Japs, should give Tokyo plenty to worry about. For it is no accident that Admiral Nimitz, commander in the Pacific, has been recalled for conferences; or that the insatiable Australian prime minister has now said he was satisfied; or that Attu was taken.

All these straws in the wind point to hitting Japan from many different directions—Alaska, Australia, Burma and the Central Pacific.

This offensive in the Far East may be one substitute for a second front in western Europe. It may not knock Hitler out of the war quite so soon, but it may make the two wars—in Europe and Asia—finish at more nearly the same time.

SAVING UNCLE SAM'S SHEKELS

Here is a simple suggestion which would save the government millions: As the law stands, a man coming into the government cannot be hired for the figure of $5,000 or $6,000, but must get one or another of the fixed government ratings, such as $4,600 or $5,600 or $6,500.

Many a man has come to Washington from the business world in the last few years, willing to work for $5,000. But there is no government rating at that figure, so he is offered $4,600, and if he won't take that, he must be paid $5,600.

Likewise, if he is a $7,000 man, willing to work for that figure but not for less, he must be given $8,000.

Literally hundreds of men have come into the War Production at salaries $500 or $1,000 more than they would have accepted, simply because the Reclassification Act of 1923 establishes the figures of $4,600, $5,600 and $6,500 with no elasticity.

The same waste results in the field of promotion. To keep good men these days, government agencies are obliged to give promotions without waiting for the 2½ year period required by Civil Service.

So the agencies resort to evasion. They reclassify the employee by writing up a new job for him at a higher salary level. He might be satisfied with a $500 raise, but reclassification means that he gets at least $900 more, or even $1,500 more.

A simple change in the law would save hundreds of dollars in thousands of cases.

AMERICAN TAXI-DRIVERS

Some political prognosticators say you can predict the outcome of U. S. elections by the reaction of taxi-drivers. However, the character of taxi-drivers may go even further and be an index of the general honesty and temperament of the American people.

OWI's Katherine C. Blackburn struck a hopping mad taxi-driver in New York the other day. He had just found $1,200 in war savings stamps which somebody had left in his cab. When he traced the "fare" and returned the stamps, all he got was congratulations on his honesty and a 25-cent tip.

"I'll never be honest again!" he declared grimly.

This brought him and Miss Blackburn to the Ritz Carlton. She got out, paid her fare, and tripped into the hotel. While she was still in the lobby, somebody tapped her on the elbow.

"Excuse me, miss," said a voice, "but you left your furs in my taxi!"

On the average of once a day, somebody with a screw loose tries to see Secretary of State Hull. One such, called to explain to Hull his method of stopping torpedoes. He was stopped by a secretary.

COLLEGES AND CONGRESSMEN

Harvard, Yale and Princeton may be well represented in the state department, but when it comes to congress, a grab-bag selection of names turns up such colleges as John Carroll university (Congressman Michael A. Feighan of Ohio). Baldwin Wallace college (Congressman Henderson H. Carson of Ohio). Creighton university (Congressman Frank A. Barrett of Wyoming). Marshall college (Congressman Hubert S. Ellis of West Virginia).

A Lot to Learn

By JAMES FREEMAN
Associated Newspapers.
WNU Features.

OLD Inspector Casper Strong watched carefully as young Detective Colin East glanced around the room. The old man didn't want to appear critical or impatient. He remembered when he was a rookie. There wasn't much you could tell him then. He had been quick to take offense when someone pointed out an error, easily hurt when someone proved he was wrong.

The girl lay on the floor, a still, cold, crumpled heap. A small bottle was clutched in her right hand. The word "poison" was written on the bottle, surmounted by a skull and crossbones.

A note lay on a table near by; a chair was half twisted away from the table as though the girl had turned it when she struggled and fell to the floor.

Beside the note was a pencil. The note read: "I have no one to blame for this but myself. I was a fool to ever come to New York."

Across the room near a window a young man sat in a chair, his head in his hands, a picture of despair and misery.

Young East read the note without touching it. He looked down at the girl, glanced over at the young man, then looked at the inspector.

"She wasn't the usual run," he said. "That note is well written. Too bad she had to die."

Young East glanced toward the man near the window. "Weaver!" he said sharply.

The man looked up. There were streaks on his face, made by tears. "You discovered the body?" East said.

"Yes. We were going out. I called for her an hour ago. There was no answer. I opened the door. She was—was—" He broke off. East walked over to the inspector.

Young East glanced at the bowed head of the man near the window.

"I'd like to question the landlady," he said.

The inspector nodded and spoke to someone outside the door. A moment later a small and tired looking woman entered. She showed little emotion.

"I'd like to ask you one question," East said. "Was Miss Vail left-handed?"

The landlady hesitated. Then her face lighted. "Yes. Yes, she was. I remember seeing her at the telephone writing down notes. She always moved the pad over and wrote with her left hand."

"Ah!" declared East almost exultantly. "You may go, madame." The landlady went out. East looked at his superior triumphantly. "It wasn't suicide. It was murder! Murder! I tell you."

"What makes you think so?" asked the inspector.

East pointed to the form of the girl. "See! The bottle is held in her right hand. A left-handed person would hold the bottle in his or her left hand. Inspector, I suspected this from the start. It looked too cut-and-dried, too obvious. That's one thing I've learned: When things look obvious, start asking yourself questions. This girl was cold-bloodedly murdered!"

"Weaver," began Colin East, and then stopped. The inspector had laid a restraining hand on his arm. The inspector was smiling in a kindly fashion, yet gently reproving the impetuous young detective.

Resentment flashed into the eyes of Detective East. He followed Casper Strong reluctantly to where the girl lay. The old inspector reached down and removed the bottle from between the girl's stiffening fingers. Then he picked up her other hand, her left hand. It held a stopper. He removed the stopper and fitted it to the bottle. It was a snug fit. He pressed hard.

"Now, look," he said. "Being right-handed I hold the bottle in my right hand and attempt to remove the stopper with my left. It doesn't budge. So I shift hands, holding now the bottle in my left hand and pulling the stopper with my right. I do this because I am right-handed, hence there is more strength in my right hand."

"I guessed at it after looking around. See the note on the table and the pencil beside it. The pencil is on the left side. That indicates that the girl was left-handed. Now I discover that the stopper for the bottle is in the girl's left hand. It is a glass stopper. Glass stoppers are difficult to remove if pressed down tightly, as one would be in a bottle of poisoning. Besides, that note is written in a feminine hand. It is unlikely that a man could imitate it." The inspector smiled.

Ducks Grounded, Millions Die; Beavers to Rescue

Wild ducks are temporarily "grounded" in late summer of each year, usually in August. At this turn of the season the young have not yet learned to use their wings and, in molting, the mature birds have lost their propelling wing feathers.

Some years millions of ducks die during this period when nesting grounds suffer drouth and birds are stranded away from water. Beavers often come to the rescue . . . save thousands of ducks by damming up outlets to lakes or streams.

Use Woven Rags for Rugs and Cushions

MANY an American of pioneer background can remember when all the floors in the house except the parlor were covered with woven rag rugs and carpets. Today the local weaver with a rug loom is flourishing in many communities.

The modern weaver has an assortment of colors in warp and filler that may be used with the rags that you have prepared in the manner shown here. About one and three quarter pounds of sewn rags will be required for a square yard of carpet. Rugs may be either cotton or wool but do not use both in the same rug. The rags should be soft and clean and hems or uneven finishes should be removed. Dye white rags the colors you wish to predominate.

NOTE--It is possible to make a great variety of floor coverings from odds and ends of things on hand. Books 9 and 10 of the series offered with these articles contain fascinating new designs for hooked and braided rugs. In Book 7 there is a rug made from old felt hats and school pennants. Books are 15 cents each. Order booklets direct from:

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling. Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.
